

Open Library of Humanities

Executive Summary

The Open Library of Humanities (OLH) is a gold open access, peer-reviewed, internationally-supported, academic-led, not-for-profit, mega-journal, and multi-journal platform for the humanities. It is funded by an international library consortium and so has no author-facing charges.

Open access refers to peer-reviewed academic research that is available freely to read and re-use online. Gold open access means that this service is provided by publishers. This usually means that a new business model is needed as if the material is free to read, it cannot be sold as a subscription. Many publishers are implementing this through article and book processing charges (APCs and BPCs). These, though, are unaffordable in humanities disciplines.

The OLH works differently with a small contribution from a large number of libraries covering the costs of publication; a cost pool. The OLH thereby offers an extremely cost-effective solution for open access that means that no single institution bears a disproportionate cost. Participating libraries not only invest in a community shared service that would not otherwise be feasible but are also given a governance stake in the project.

The OLH has been internationally recognised as an important development in open access for the humanities and for its innovative business model. The platform has initial funding from the Andrew W. Mellon Foundation. David Armitage, the Lloyd C. Blankfein Professor of History at Harvard writes that “there is hardly a more important project in train for scholarship in the humanities today”. Kathleen Fitzpatrick, the Head of Scholarly Communications at the MLA, notes the “crucial changes in the debate surrounding open access” that the project has already triggered.

The platform allows for journals to move from subscription and fee-based publishers to our model. As of November 2015 the OLH publishes seven fully-OA journals. A further four journals, which were previously subscription-based, are moving to the platform in January. When journals with other subscription-based or fee-based publishers opt to leave their current providers and join OLH, libraries will see direct cancellations and a transition to OA. This will eventually provide demonstrable and real savings to library budgets.

There are three levels of contribution to the platform as of November 2015. For institutions with 1,000 FTE+ the annual fee is $1,400 AUD. For institutions with 5,000-9,999 FTE the fee is $1000 AUD. For smaller institutions the fee is $700 AUD. Fees may be raised only on the vote of the library board.

About the Open Library of Humanities

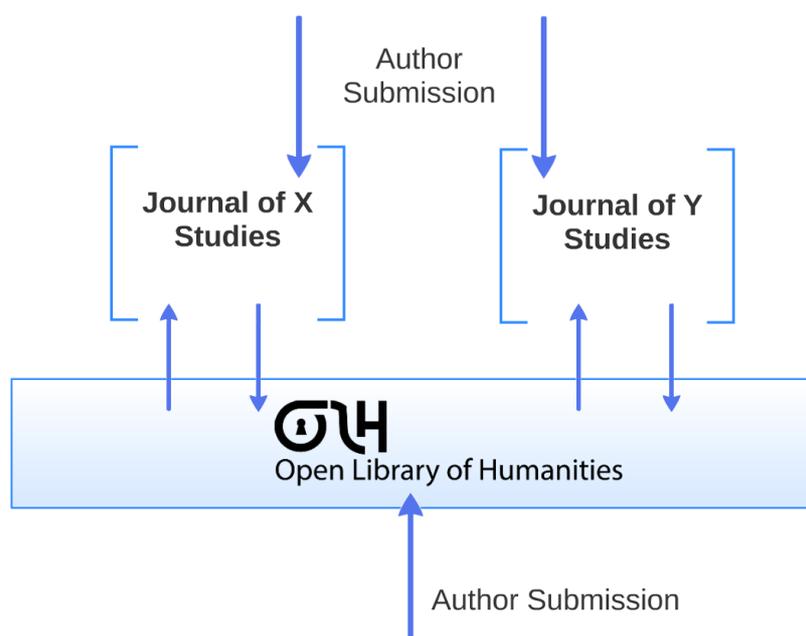

Background

In recent years, open access has come to dominate the scholarly communications landscape. The promise of freely readable and reusable research material finally seems possible in the digital environment. However, the proposition has been met with staunch opposition in the humanities disciplines, often on financial grounds. With an Article Processing Charge model for open access, it is feared that the different funding climate in these disciplines will lead to the inability of many scholars to pay.

First proposed in early 2013, the Open Library of Humanities aims to address these problems and to provide equitable open access for the humanities. With initial funding and support from the Andrew W. Mellon Foundation, the not-for-profit platform has an international support base and an innovative economic model that means there are no author-facing charges (and never will be) for our gold open access.

Components

The OLH has two components: a new megajournal and a service infrastructure for existing journals to migrate to the platform.

The OLH Megajournal is a peer-reviewed (double-blind), quality-orientated, interdisciplinary journal that spans the humanities disciplines. The editorial process is overseen centrally, with expert “section editors” handling submissions as they arrive.

In addition, OLH Journals are existing journals that have opted to join the OLH. These journals maintain full brand autonomy and independence of review practice. We provide these journals with a platform for hosting content; a platform for accepting submissions and coordinating review; XML, PDF and HTML typesetting of articles; a dedicated editorial support manager; ongoing technical support and platform maintenance; digital preservation in the CLOCKSS archive; CrossRef DOIs for every article; membership of the Committee on Publication Ethics; and gold open access with no author charges. Admission to the platform is via a rigorous selection process involving our academic and library committees.

Disciplinary Range

The OLH takes a broad, inclusive understanding of the academic humanities, from classics, religious studies & theology, modern languages and literatures through to political philosophy, musicology, critical legal studies, anthropology and newer subject areas such as critical theory and cultural studies, film, media and TV studies.

Project Directors

The platform is coordinated and managed by Dr. Martin Paul Eve (author of Open Access and the Humanities: Contexts, Controversies and the Future, Cambridge University Press 2014) and Dr. Caroline Edwards.

Academic Steering Committee

Extensive consultation has taken place with high-profile academics and librarians from our committees, including, but not limited to:

David Armitage (Harvard)	Martin McQuillan (Kingston)
Marguerite Avery (MIT Press)	Nora McGregor (The British Library)
Robert Eaglestone (Royal Holloway)	Bethany Nowviskie (University of Virginia)
Michael Eisen (PLOS)	David Palumbo-Liu (Stanford)
Steven Engler (Mount Royal University, Calgary)	Oya Y. Rieger (Cornell; arXiv)
Kathleen Fitzpatrick (MLA),	Ben Showers (Jisc)
David Gauntlett (Westminster),	Peter Suber (Harvard OA Project)
Catherine Grant (Sussex)	Melissa Terras (UCL Centre for Digital Humanities)
Eve Gray (University of Cape Town)	Sanford G. Thatcher (ex-Penn State UP)
Cable Green (Creative Commons)	Patricia Waugh (Durham)
Gary Hall (Coventry; Open Humanities Press)	Peter Webster (the British Library)
Robert Judd (American Musicological Society)	John Willinsky (Stanford)
Robert Kiley (Wellcome Library)	James Willsdon (Sussex)
Vicky Lebeau (Sussex)	Jane Winters (IHR)

Testimonials

“The Open Library of the Humanities promises crucial changes in the debate surrounding open access publishing, by bringing together a robust, standards- based technical platform with rigorous scholarly oversight, innovative editorial practices, and an emphasis on community outreach.”

– Kathleen Fitzpatrick
Head of Scholarly Communications, MLA

“The Open Library of the Humanities is a transformative venture on the leading edge of open-access initiatives on both sides of the Atlantic. There is hardly a more important project in train for scholarship in the humanities today.”

– David Armitage
Lloyd C. Blankfein Professor of History
Harvard University

The Open Library of Humanities has featured in many prominent publications, worldwide, including The Chronicle of Higher Education, The Times Higher Education, the Guardian, Library Journal, the LSE Impact Blog, Research Fortnight, The Atlantic and many others.

Technology and Standards

The Open Library of Humanities is built upon a robust standardised platform that integrates with all major library cataloguing and discoverability systems. The submission platform, developed by Ubiquity Press, is based upon PKP's Open Journal Systems, but has been extensively modified to accommodate the editorial flow that is needed in a highly-distributed, large-scale system. The source code for all of our modifications will be released under an open license.

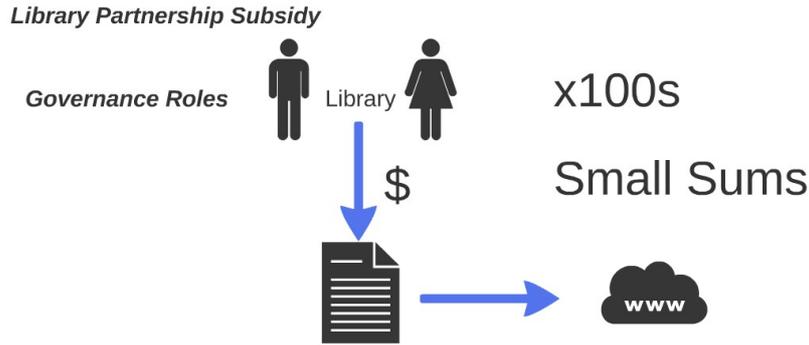

All OLH journals expose OAI harvestable metadata in NLM, MARC, MARC21, RFC1807 and DC formats. This includes title, author and content type. All journals implement full export to bibliographic management tools (Zotero translator etc.).

Furthermore, all OLH journals are intended to be fully accessible. This includes the use of dyslexia-friendly fonts and compliant markup to aid screen readers.

All OLH articles are assigned CrossRef DOIs, with archiving and preservation provided through CLOCKSS. Federated searching is anticipated to be implemented by deposit of article-level metadata in the Directory of Open Access Journals.

Membership and Benefits

The OLH is a not-for-profit charitable UK company limited by guarantee and is funded through a system called “Library Partnership Subsidies”. We have no shareholders and all revenue goes directly to open-access publishing. Open Library of Humanities is a registered charity in England and Wales (1163413).

In this mode, rather than institutions bearing the whole cost when their researchers need to publish (as with open access through “article processing charges”), this model instead spreads costs across institutions; much like the advantageous aspects of the subscription model. Except, in this case, the results are made openly accessible.

The model is extremely cost effective, with a base cost of approximately $500 per article. This covers ongoing technological costs, staff costs, digital preservation, typesetting and other costs. When this is spread across institutions, with just 125 institutions participating at the higher level of banding ($1,000) we will be able to publish 250 articles per year. This would be a cost to each institution of just $4 per open-access article. This economy of scale improves as more institutions join.

Furthermore, because existing journals can migrate on to the OLH platform, institutions have a route to a transition for open access. This means that as journals that were previously with commercial publishers move across, participating libraries should see direct cancellations, allowing a transfer of budgets into funding open access.

Institutional Banding and Pricing

In order to allow institutions of all sizes to participate in the Library Partnership Subsidy model, we have banded prices according to size of institution.

FTE	Annual Price
10,000+	$1,400 AUD
5,000-9,999	$1,000 AUD
0-5,000	$700 AUD

Participating libraries/institutions may opt to pay a multi-year sum in advance if they so wish. Likewise, if institutions wish to support the platform by paying more than the amount listed, as some have already indicated, this is welcome and possible.

How to Join

Prospective members should email martin.eve@openlibhums.org to sign up.

Institutional Benefits

The primary institutional benefit is to reduce the strain on library budgets through a transition to open access. By supporting this transition in ways that work for humanities disciplines, institutions should see long-term benefits.

Institutions and individuals who participate in the OLH Library Partnership Subsidy (LPS) are entitled to membership of the OLH Library Board.

The OLH Library Board (LB), in conjunction with the Academic Steering and Advisory Committee (ASAC) and the OLH Directors, determine the right of admission for new journals (“overlay journals”) to the OLH platform. This, in turn, means that these three entities collectively determine the year-on-year budget. The boards, except in exceptional circumstances, discuss these matters and vote through online channels.

Proposals for new journal admission and/or budget increases to scale megajournal operation will be brought before the boards by the Directors on a quarterly basis. The Directors, along with any other member of the LB, may give their opinions on the suitability of admission. These remain merely opinions. Voting periods will last for a minimum of 14 days in each case. Every member of the LB will have a vote. Proposals will be carried if 60% of votes are in favour of the proposal under discussion. There is no level of required quorum.

An institution's seat on the OLH Library Board is tenable for the period of its paid membership. OLH Library Board members are entitled to a yearly report detailing the outputs of the project and the ways in which library funds are being spent solely to further the enterprise of open-access publishing.

Participating libraries are also entitled to a listing on the OLH website. It is clear that publishing is not a cost-free enterprise but often researchers/scholars are unaware that the library budget supports their activities. This prominent brand placement is designed to change this.
